

Robot Project

by Rachel Weiss

Doing the Robot project was the beginning of a huge learning curve for me. It was probably the project I spent the most time on. It was painstakingly hard. I was so frustrated trying to figure out how to use each of the tools and let go of the right keys in the right order and also be creative and enjoy the project, it was quite the duddy. However, I finished and felt a huge sense of pride when I did. I excitedly showed my roommate Ashley who I was studying with in the Library and she congratulated me too. :) The research- looking on pintrist for robot ideas was the most fun. I loved the proceses of gathering different pieces of inspiration and then making them whole, into one. I found that so fun. I also really enjoyed that even though my robot felt simple, and I know that if I was to make more robots in the future they would be much better, I was pleased with my work. In this class I try to feel the joy of experiences making something for the first time, using the tools I have, without grilling myself for creating something as beautiful as the mona lisa. Effort is good to put in, and I know that my skill and experience as a designer will grow.

“I loved the proceses of gathering different pieces of inspiration and then making them whole”

City Project

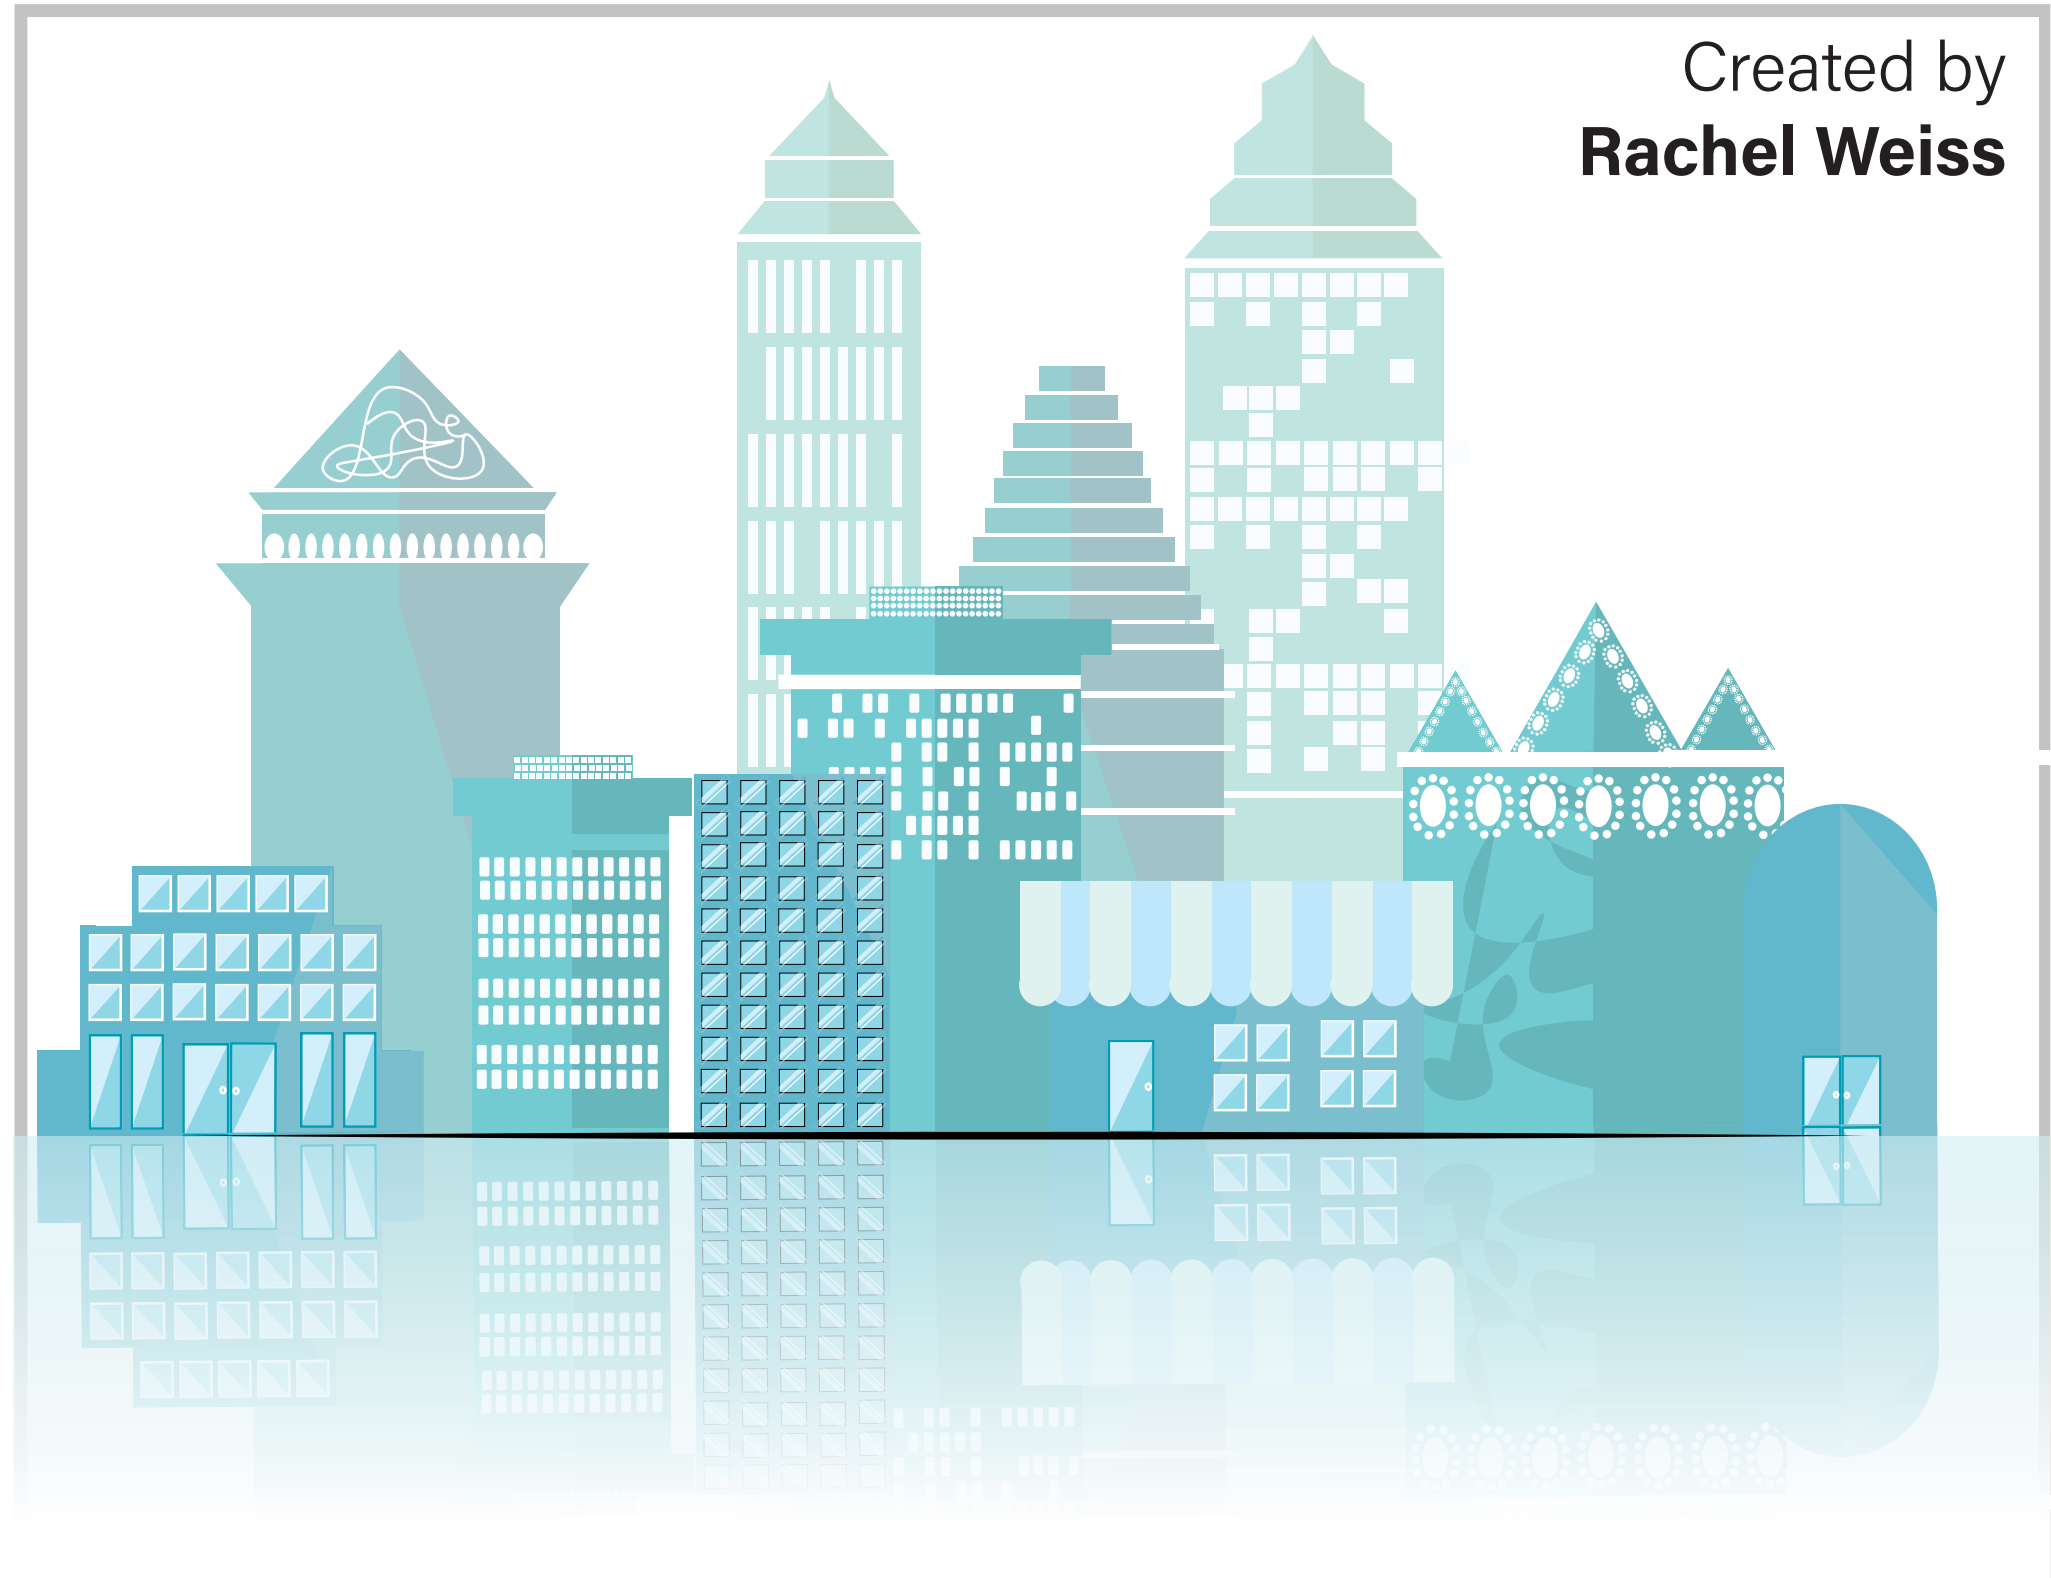

By Rachel Weiss

Working on the city project was a ton of fun. I think I spent the most time on this project over any other. I felt much more confident in my ability to use the illustrator tools and loved doing this project in my favorite colors. Again here,

*...to remember that place
...where I came to know Jesus so much.*

I really enjoyed gathering color pallet ideas and looking at buildings. I even asked my brother and my boyfriend which pallets they liked best! I drew a ton of inspiration for my city scape from the Philadelphia skyline, which is where I served my mission. The two buildings in the back especially are like the two twin buildings there that I saw everyday for so many days on my mission. It was really fun and meaningful to me to remember that place that is so dear to me and where I came to know Jesus so much.

Created by Rachel Weiss

Pixabay Project

By Rachel Weiss

This project was awesome. I again, really really struggled with learning photo shop, but I loved shopping for inspo and images. However, once I got the process down, I really enjoyed being proficient in it. Proficiency in a new skill is a really great feeling.

even in the dark. That the bright lights only reveal all your hard work in the dark. I really feel this way towards my journey with adobe products. Learning

